Vice President of Administrative Affairs Stacy Volnick presented an update on the Boca Raton and Jupiter campus master plans and on capital projects. She presented the draft master plans as an informational item at the March meeting earlier this year. They had their first public hearings in June and the 90-day public review ends this month. The second public hearing will be in October and the plans will go to the full board in November. There are five phases of a master planning process. We are in the fifth phase. Trustee Rubin asked if there had been any public comments. Ms. Volnick said they have been dealt with through the process.

Ms. Volnick then turned to capital projects, going over the Schmidt Family Complex for Academic & Athletic Excellence project scope and status. It is due to be completed in December at its final approved cost of $74.5M. She also spoke about the Student Union Expansion & Renovation project scope, funded at $27.5M from OIF and Auxiliary funds, and expected to be completed in February 2021. The renovation of the existing Student Union will include food services and market, conference rooms, computer store and gaming room.

commission is not one that targets people. An inquiry that exonerates someone is as valid as one that indicts them.

Mr. Anderson said they have nine member board. Since the FAU trustees are at the state level, they would need to disclose if they had any voting conflicts in the performance of their public duties. He described the Commission's process if a complaint comes in. He also described the State's statutory "doing business with" provisions for public officers.

Finally, Mr. Anderson described the ethics related constitutional amendments that were approved by the voters in 2018. He highlighted the new provisions prohibiting the abuse of a public position, and the Commission's discretion in developing the standard for that offense.
